

KU Debate-cum-Interactive Session for Distance Learners

The Directorate of Distance Education, in addition to the conduct of Contact Programmes, has a rich heritage of offering extra academic activities to the distance learners in the form of seminars, workshops, extension lectures, interactive sessions, etc. In this regard, the DDE organized a Debate-cum-Interactive Session for the PG English students. The objective of such programmes is to help the distance learners in developing their communication skills and ingredients required for the public debates, discussions and interactions in future. The motive is also to eliminate the inhibitions of expression among the distance learners. The students showed keen interest in the programme and actively participated by expressing their ideas on topics related to various themes of political, social, and educational significance. They also engaged in lively discussions on these themes.

The programme was highly appreciated and applauded by the participating students with the demand of more such activities from the Directorate. Director DDE, Prof. Neelofar Khan, in her presiding lecture, promised more such activities in future also.
